AMERICA'S OLDEST COACH AND FOUR

The coachman's horn is ringing o'er the Virginia countryside once more as it did in Colonial days. The Mount Vernon and Mt. Vee Coach Line has begun operations between the George Washington estate at Mount Vernon and the thirty-five unit Mt. Vee Motel on U. S. Route One, just below Alexandria. Now the tourist . . in addition to seeing how and where George Washington lived . . can ride the route Washington travelled between Mount Vernon and Alexandria in the same mode of trasport as our first president.

Operating the only public coach and four route in America today, the Mount Vernon and Mt. Vee line offers daily afternoon service every forty-five minutes in its authentic Brewster Drag Coach. Fare for the four-mile round trip is one dollar.

The protected crest-shape body will carry four persons inside but the thrill . . and the view . . is had by the twelve who ride on top. As they tower over today's low sleek automobiles, they can feel the speed and daring that set coaching apart from less spectacular two horse vehicles. The skill required to handle four spirited horses made coaching an art. The glamour of coaching so appealed to a few wealthy horsemen that it srurvived as a sport long after the railroad took its place as a means of transportation.

The establishment of the Mount Vernon and Mt. Vee coach line knotted a few bows of Virginia state officials. The State Corporation Commission could find no statutes covering common carrier service by a coach and four. It wanted no part of "regulating" horse-drawn transportation. The Virginia State Police similary found themsvlees without authority. You don't need license plates or a driver's license to operate a coach in the Commonwealth. In fact, the Sbtate Police found themselves without the means to keep coaches off the main highways, and they had a few anxious moments until they discovered that the Mount Vernon and Mt. Vee line was planning to operate over back roads.

Charlottesville, Va.- The League of Virginia Counties is resuming publication of its official monthly magazine, The Virginia County, it was announced here by W. B. Speck, of this city, Field Secretary of the organization. Claire M. Nichols, of Richmond, has been named executive editor, he added.

The magazine, founded by the League of Virginia Counties in 1946 to tell the Virginia story, will be published on a non-profit basis, the Field Secretary said.
